WORLD cultures were celebrated at a school in Windsor on Wednesday when a country-themed day took place.

Youngsters from years five to nine at Brigids School, in Queensmead, Kings Road, took part in a French market, Punjabi singing, 'al chi sessions, Scottish line dancing, as well as various language classes.

A competition was also held during the afternoon, as linguistic pupils gave presentations in French or Spanish competing for prizes.

Organiser Fleur Pelly, language teacher at the school, said it was held to raise awareness of the countries across the world.

"The aim of the day is to make pupils aware of languages, cultures, and customs of different countries around the world.

"It has been great fun and the pupils have thrown themselves into it and so have the staff. It has been brilliant," she said.

The event was held as part of European Day of Languages, which is being held in schools across the continent.
